NC3 Signing Day

Over 140 students from the San Diego Unified High School District braved the winter weather to attend the first ever Miramar College Career Education Signing Day held Feb. 21 on campus.

Almost 50 of the 140 students signed letters of intent to enroll at the College in a career education program such as Administration of Justice, Advanced Transportation Technology, Diesel Technology, Biotechnology and Fire Technology.

Like the National Letter of Intent signing day for athletes, Miramar College introduced a new twist to the "signing day" concept by focusing on education.

In addition to students pledging their commitment to study at Miramar College, there were demonstrations and hands on activities for those students who are interested in career technical education. Advanced Transportation students paired up with current Miramar College students to get a firsthand experience in the classroom. Biotech students took part in a forensic crime lab demonstration, while Administration of Justice students were allowed to use the patrol car driving simulators.

"Our event was bigger than we had anticipated," said Ben Gamboa, associate dean, Strong Workforce Programs at San Diego Miramar College. "It was rather heartwarming to see kids, who just two months ago didn't see themselves in college now have a chance to make a college decision that will lead to a high paying career and security for themselves and their families."

Participants received a tour of their career training program, signed their letter-of-intent to attend Miramar College, received program swag, and enjoyed a meet-and-greet with faculty and employers over lunch.

Providing the keynote speech was Ray Rivera, a diesel technology program graduate who went through the San Diego Metropolitan Transit System (MTS) apprenticeship program. Rivera is currently employed at MTS as a Quality Assurance Inspector.

CBS 8 covered the event and you can view their coverage by clicking here. A photo gallery of the event can be found here.

Campus Cares

Miramar College is participating in a pilot project sponsored by the State Chancellor's Office entitled Caring Campus. The first cohort of 15 classified professionals started the training on Feb. 1. President Hsieh welcomed the group as they embarked on their training. The Caring Campus initiative is specifically for Classified Professional Staff, who through their participation in a number of workshops, will receive evidence-based coaching on how to increase student connectedness to the college to directly enhance student engagement and success.

Each campus participating designates one or two classified professionals (front line staff who interact with students on a daily basis) from various departments across campus for a total of 20 to 30 participants. This core group will be responsible for attending all of the required workshops and for bringing the information they learn back to others in their departments. This “train-the-trainer” model will then be the foundation for creating a campus-wide environment focused on increasing student connectedness. The next 3 hour workshop is March 8. In between each three hour meeting, the participants will need to spend approximately 2 hours sharing the information with their fellow department members in order to create a culture of caring.
